Capital Ready For Impressive New Year's Day

Washington Will Assume Its Most Austere Phase; Secretary of State Is to Hold a Diplomatic Breakfast

Band of Calls Planned

Lovely Will Pay Their Respects to the Vice-President and Mrs. Coolidge

Special Dispatch to The Tribune
WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Christmas week turns Washington from a national capital into the semblance of any other city of its size, save for the more or less picturesque events in progress at embassies and legations, and it took a full stretch of the imagination to find anything but the typically American in the very many small balls and dances that kept the younger element of society busy. Cadets from West Point and Annapolis and from the military schools of the country swarmed the city and lent color and brightness to all, debaucherie, semi-debaucherie and even younger parties. Almost every household entertained a New Year's party and practically every school in the country was represented by numerous students.

The Minister of Switzerland and the Minister of the Netherlands, who came from Harvard and the other from the University of Virginia. The Vice-President and Mrs. Coolidge had their sons, John and Calvin Coolidge, and from the same academy in Pennsylvania came many other boys.

New Year's Day will mark the dividing line between the semi-official and the real official season, and from today on the Capital will assume a more austere phase. Visiting will be restricted to all, debaucherie, semi-debaucherie and even younger parties. Almost every household entertained a New Year's party and practically every school in the country was represented by numerous students.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hughes have issued invitations for the New Year's Day diplomatic breakfast, the cards being of heavy, heavy paper, four by six inches, with the State Department crest imprinted. The engraved wording is simple, reading: "The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hughes request the honor of the company of the guest at breakfast on Monday, the first of January, at half after twelve o'clock, at the Pan-American Union." There is little to indicate that the event is the most splendid in the social annals of Washington. Ambassadors and Ministers and their military and naval attaches and other members of their suites will wear their court dress, while every woman of the diplomatic corps will wear the latest fashion of London or Paris, or perhaps from the modish shops in New York.

The diplomats will pay their respects to the Vice-President and Mrs. Coolidge and the younger diplomats will make many other calls. While most of the members of the President's Cabinet will follow the time-honored traditions and keep open house Monday, the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Daniels used it as a means of keeping alive good fellowship between themselves and the Navy officers in and out of Washington.

The Secretary of War held a like reception, both events following the White House reception. After their breakfast the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hughes are relieved of further social obligations for the day, and with the White House reception necessarily abandoned the day will certainly not be a strenuous one for officials. Mr. Denby, it is said, will go on a hunting or fishing cruise.

House to House Visiting Plan Will Be Followed
Oldtime house to house visiting will be instituted for New Year's Day and the day after. The plan will be followed by the Secretary of the Navy will be the reception to be held at Wardman Park Hotel by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert E. Kountz, wife of the chief of naval affairs, who will have a number of the wives of admirals and others to assist her.

Mr. Edward Beale McLean, who opened her town house for a charmingly arranged children's party New Year's Eve, will give a ball New Year's morning in honor of Miss Beatrice Pitney, daughter of Mr. Justice Pitney and Mrs. Pitney, who have bought a house in Washington. Mrs. McLean's ball will be preceded by a dinner, at which there will be a hundred or more guests.

Miss Alice Mellon, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury, who is returning to Washington to-day from attending Christmas in Pittsburgh, will open her house for her father. The Speaker of the House and Mrs. Frederick H. Gillett will receive Monday, having as visitors many from both the upper and lower house of Congress, as well as persons from unofficial society. Miss Louise Howe, who recently returned to Washington and joined her family after a visit with the charge d'affaires of the legation in London, and Mrs. James Clements Dunn will entertain at the White House on Monday and the first Wednesday in January.

Bringing a thrill is the expected arrival in New York January 2 of the British fleet, headed by the Admiral. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, who will be accompanied by Mrs. Baldwin and their daughter, Miss Baldwin. A large suite has been engaged for the reception at the Sherrin Hotel, who are accompanying Mr. Baldwin will be Mr. Montague Norman, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Grigg, both of whom are known here from Mr. Grigg being attached to the embassy staff for a long time; Mr. E. R. Dutton and Mr. Loring Christie.

The Ambassador and Lady Geddes will entertain at dinner for the members of the mission on Saturday night, January 6, and on the night of January 7, the British Embassy will give a dinner in their honor. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hughes and the Under Secretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips and others will entertain for the British visitors.

Montreal calls you to the great winter playground

COME and find health, relaxation and pleasure in the clear, crisp invigorating air. Come and find unbounded freedom and action in all that Montreal offers you in winter recreation. Come and enjoy the land of winter dreams, where under clear blue skies and on matchless starlit nights these old-time sports are at their best.

Montreal has arranged a two months' programme of continuous sport for you—hardly an hour of each day without some attraction for old and young. Gliding down the slopes of hoary Mount Royal on an old-fashioned toboggan, skating, skiing, ski-joring, speeding along the St. Lawrence on an ice boat, hiking across country on snowshoes. See the spectacular hockey, ice trotting and contests by leading champions of every sport, the parades, the carnival features, music, old French folk songs—these are the everyday happenings of Montreal during January and February. Come and enjoy them.
